

Christian Combs and Noé Elmaleh are new faces of Dolce & Gabbana

January 9, 2018

Italian fashion house Dolce & Gabbana has revealed a series of shots from its spring/summer 2018 campaign on Instagram. For its latest ads, the brand has once again signed up celebrity kids, plus a handful of much-followed social media influencers. Faces include Christian Combs, the son of Sean Combs aka P. Diddy, and Noé Elmaleh, son of French comedian and actor Gad Elmaleh.

For its latest campaign, the Italian fashion house has enlisted photographers Luca and Alessandro Morelli, also known as "The Morelli Brothers." The pair photographed the various young talents in the heart of Venice, in spectacular settings in and around the Italian city.

In recent seasons, Dolce & Gabbana has been keen to sign up young icons of the fashion world, from celebrity kids to internationally renowned influencers. Although far from the star models that the ready-to-wear world is clamoring to enlist -- like Bella and Gigi Hadid -- these budding talents are no less popular and, above all, are very well followed by Generation Y, one of the luxury label's key new targets.

For spring/summer 2018, the Dolce & Gabbana campaign features P. Diddy's son Christian Combs, Gad Elmaleh's son Noé Elmaleh, Lady Diana's niece Lady Kitty Spencer, American vlogger Cameron Dallas, and models Frankie Herbert and Bea Fresson.

Artfully captured by the Morelli Brothers, this new generation showcases pieces from a sophisticated and sometimes highly colorful collection, paying homage to Dolce & Gabbana's "Queens of Hearts."

Previously, for the spring/summer 2017 season, the Italian fashion house's ads featured rising stars including Zendaya, Cameron Dallas, Gabriel-Kane Day-Lewis and Thylane Blondeau.
